Is rainbow six siege worth it on ps4

I (28M) have recently started playing Rainbow Six Siege again at the behest of my girlfriend (24F) and a group of mutual friends. I'd played Siege a whole bunch during the first two years of content, and was around to see Operation Health in all its "glory", but for whatever reason, my interest in the game dropped off a cliff. Maybe it was the fact that my aim was never brilliant, or I'd just moved on to other games, but Siege just happened to fall out of my rotation. Now that I'm back, I'm enjoying myself with the game more than perhaps I ever have. Sure, there's a lot of new operators, maps and mechanics to deal with (I'm still sad about Tachanka losing his turret, but that's another story), but after about a week or so with the game, everything has managed to click into place. My aim isn't much better, but at least people still jump into Frost's Welcome Mats with an alarming regularity. One aspect about Siege that hasn't changed though is the toxicity. Team-killing and grieving has been a part of Siege's identity ever since the game launched, so being on the receiving end of some backlash from a Gfuel chugging 15-year old isn't exactly unexpected, especially when I was playing over the Easter holiday. What else were they going to do, spend time with their family? However, there's been a certain trend of team-killing that's emerged from certain players as I've played: the entitlement to an ace (killing the entire enemy team in one round solo). During an unranked match on the map Oregon, we were defending Basement and one player managed to kill three of the enemy team. Him and my girlfriend were hunting down the fourth player when he intentionally turned towards her, blasted her in the face and then went and got kill number four. A few matches later on Chalet, I managed to secure a kill through the garage door, but a Doc who had taken out a few enemies beforehand took umbrage with me and decided to turn my head to mush through two walls. The intention was incredibly clear. Siege For their part, Ubisoft have done their part already to discourage players from intentionally team-killing and grieving. If you receive damage from another teammate, you're able to vote on whether or not the damage was intentional. If so, reverse friendly fire is activated for that player (or even their entire squad if they've all been naughty), meaning any damage inflicted on another friendly player by them is reflected back. Trying to team-kill someone will just lead to them being murdered. Still, that's not enough for someone like me, so I've decided to take matters into my own hands: you want to team-kill me or my friends, you'll get it right back. That Oregon match? The douchebag felt the wrath of my Super 90 shotgun, then I won the round anyway. As for the Chalet dick, I got my revenge at the start of the next round, causing their friend to chase me around the map for 30 seconds. When they did finally get a shot off on me, their reverse friendly fire activated mid-spray, causing them to die as they were shooting me. I don't think I've laughed that much in a long time. While I feel I'm completely justified, there's probably an argument to be made that doing so ruins the chances of winning for other players on my time, and fighting fire with fire is just creating a scorched earth. That said, people shouldn't be allowed to run roughshod over a lobby just because someone else might stop them from getting their precious ace, or picking an operator they main. Am I the asshole for team-killing people as revenge in Rainbow Six Siege? Rainbow Six Siege is available now on PC, PS4, PS5, Xbox One, and Xbox Series X | S. Please note that this list is not exhaustive, and should only be used as a reference to give a general idea of where our focus currently is. Crouch Running We know that crouch running (normal movement speed while crouching) can sometimes lead to frustration in the hands of certain Operators, allowing them to arrive on the scene quickly and more discretely than others. Currently, we're making some tweaks to the volume of crouch walking. We want crouch walking to be a viable option for all Operators, while ensuring that the action can be heard. Status: Y7S2 FOV Slider for Consoles We hear you, you want an FOV slider on consoles! Changing the FOV can have an impact on performance, and it's important that if a player prefers a higher FOV, that the game retains it's playability. To this end, we're currently testing this option on current and last gen consoles, ensuring that a high FOV can be used to it's full potential. Status: During Y7S1 Deployment Progress Timing In some cases the deployment progress bar may not perfectly align with the timing of the action itself, meaning that cancelling deployment in the last moment, can lead to a gadget still being placed. It's crucial that this can be trusted in those high pressure moments, and so we're reworking this to make it completely reliable. Status: During Y7 Loadout Reset During the course of Y6S4 we have seen a reduction in loadout resets occurring, however we're aware that with the additional customisation of Elite 2.0, this issue has the potential to cause increased frustration. We continue to monitor and actively investigate this, as we work towards a definitive solution. Status: Ongoing Squad Management Currently, managing your squad can be a cumbersome process, requiring players to create new squads if they'd like to remove players or change the squad leader. We're working on options that will simplify this process, allowing players to be promoted to leader, or removed from the group. Status: During Y7 Servers & Connectivity Of course, good connectivity is key to having a good Siege experience. After an increase in connectivity issues resulting in disconnections was recently found, members of our team were dedicated to investigate and resolve the issue. As part of this, we knew that we needed to alleviate the chance of a wrongful sanction being handed out. To this end, we've updated our system to reduce the chance of a sanction being given in a case where it is not warranted. Our work on connectivity continues, and we'll be providing updates on this as we make further improvements. Cheating, Hacking & Toxicity Cheating Cheating continues to be a top priority for us and adding the phone verification requirement for Ranked is just one of the actions that we're currently taking to help with this. While this feature rolls out, we're working on and exploring further solutions and improvements, and we'll be sharing more on this subject as soon as we're ready. To see our latest updates on Anti-cheat, dig into February's Anti-Cheat Status Update and our Understanding Anti-Cheat Blog. Privacy Mode It's important that streamers and players alike are able to protect themselves and are given the privacy options to do that. We recently started with a soft launch of the upcoming Privacy Mode, giving participants the opportunity to test out new features, provide feedback, and ultimately to help improve the overall experience. Once we're satisfied that the updated Privacy Mode gives players the protection they need, we will move forward with a full release. Until then, work continues to ensure that the right options are included to help players have a safe and customisable experience. Status: Targeting later in Y7S1 Mouse & Keyboard On Consoles Our dedicated team continues to work on this project, evaluating and testing solutions to move forward with. It's important to us that using spoofers do not provide an advantage for players, creating a level playing field for all. At the same time, we don't want to exclude players who need these from an accessibility standpoint. It's crucial that we take the right approach for our players, and we'll be sharing more information once we're confident with our solution. Status: Ongoing Want to look back at our previous update? Find it here. Next week, Rainbow Six Siege will be free on select platforms for a limited time. To celebrate the Demon Veil update's release, Rainbow Six Siege will be free from March 17 through March 24, 2022, on PS4, PS5, Stadia, and PC. The new Team Deathmatch mode included in the Demon Veil update (which came out Tuesday) will also be free to try. Xbox owners aren't being left out either, as Rainbow Six Siege is already free for Game Pass subscribers. (It's worth it, trust me) From now until March 28, 2022, the Year Pass and Premium Year Pass will be on sale for $30 and $60, respectively. The Year Pass unlocks four seasonal Battle Passes, while the Premium Year Pass does the same while also opening the first 20 tiers rather quickly. Written by Kyle Campbell on behalf of GLHF.
